Outcry: Protesters gather to voice their concerns outside council offices

OPPONENTS to plans to build a waste plant in Pinkham Way demonstrated outside Haringey Council's headquarters on Monday.

Campaigners were calling for councillors to halt the planning process until the North London Waste Plan consultation results are published early next year.

The controversial plans for the Pinkham Way site, off the North Circular Road, include proposals for a 15,000 square metre site, which will accept up to 300,000 tons of waste every year from seven north London boroughs, including Haringey. The plans were raised in a motion by Juliet Solomon during the full council meeting at the civic centre in the High Road, Wood Green, the Lib Dem councillor tried to get the full council to agree to wording that said the council was opposed to the plans. But the motion was amended and passed to say the council would continue to lobby the North London Waste Authority to delay lodging a detailed planning application until next year.

Two weeks ago Labour councillors from neighbouring Enfield also voted through a motion, this time to flat-out reject any new waste plants within their borders – including the controversial Pinkham Way development – and instead called for the focus to be on potential sites in Barnet.

The move was not backed by the Tory opposition, while the Labour majority also urged Barnet Council not to go ahead with its plan to use the Pinkham Way site as a depot for its refuse vehicles. The Labour-led council has also called on Haringey counterparts to hold fire on making a decision on the Pinkham Way waste treatment site until the consultation of the waste plan has been fully reviewed.

Haringey Council said it has successfully lobbied the waste authority to delay its planning application until a public inspector can review the waste plan early next year. An application for the publicly opposed waste plan is expected to be submitted from April 2012.

Alan Strickland, cabinet member for economic development, said: "We're determined to ensure we have a fair, open and transparent process based on good quality information. We're pleased the NLWA has responded to our lobbying on this."

"We'll run an extended consultation with exhibitions and public forums in Haringey, Enfield and Barnet to make sure everyone is fully informed. I'll be working closely with all councillors to make sure residents are kept up-to-date with what's being proposed and I will ensure that all voices are heard."

New boss steps up in plan to restore and revive Ally Pally

By Nicholas Brighton

WHEELS have been set in motion to plan Alexandra Palace's future after a new chief executive was appointed.

Duncan Wilson OBE will take up his position this autumn and joins from the Greenwich Foundation for The Old Royal College where he has been chief executive for the past nine years.

This is the first step in bringing the two organisations running the palace – The charitable trust and its trading company – closer together by bringing in one staffing structure.

Mr Wilson will be responsible for taking the current £100million redevelopment process forward to regenerate the palace as an entertainment and leisure venue. It is estimated £29m alone is needed just to restore the deteriorating building which was hit by two devastating fires.

Matt Cooke, chairman of the board of trustees, said: "We are delighted that Duncan is to join us as the new chief executive. With Duncan's proven leadership and strong background in both the heritage and leisure sectors, he is ideally placed to ensure the right balance between preserving its history and attracting the vital commercial investment needed."

The Old Royal Naval College, under the direction of Mr Wilson, has become one of London's top attractions with over one million visitors a year. He previously held posts at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport as well as working as a professional archaeologist, having gained a postgraduate degree at Oxford University.

Mr Wilson, who was awarded an OBE for services to heritage, added: "I'm excited to be joining Alexandra Palace at such an important time, building on the progress already made and strengthening the cultural identity of one of London's most famous landmarks."

Digging deep: Duncan Wilson hopes to restore Alexandra Palace to its former glory as part of the £100m redevelopment

Prison for pickpockets on buses

TWO prolific pickpockets who targeted the elderly on buses have been jailed.

Ivanka Koleva, 42, of Allison Road, Hornsey, was sentenced to two years while Elissaveta Vassileva, 36, of Wightman Road, Finsbury Park, received a sentence of 15 months, and both received anti-social behaviour orders. The women were arrested by the Metropolitan and the British Transport police forces as part of Project Spiderweb to make the transport network safer.

The pair committed eight thefts on buses in north London between October 2010 and March this year. Five of their eight victims were elderly or vulnerable.

Both pleaded guilty at Southwark Crown Court, Koleva also pleading guilty to an offence of possession of false ID. If they breach their Asbos preventing them from pickpocketing behaviour, they could land a £5,000 fine or five years in prison. The court also recommended deporting Koleva and Vassileva to their home country of Bulgaria at the end of their sentences.

The year of our Laud as house is lined up for almighty boost

Historic Lauderdale set for £2m scheme

IN a lonely corner of Lauderdale House you will find a timeline. Instantly eye-catching it will probably surprise you with a number of facts: 1582 the house was built; 1670 Nell Gwynn, Charles II's mistress, lived here; 1782 John Wesley preached calling it, "One of the most elegant boarding houses in England"; 1963 a fire destroyed a large portion of the house.

Well, it's hoped that timeline will soon have to be extended to include another significant development – 2012/2013 a £2million redevelopment transformed the house into a must-see tourist attraction.

The arts centre in Highgate Hill will soon be applying for half a million pounds of Heritage Lottery money. If that's a success it will then look to raise another £1.5m to fund some great-looking modern additions as well as looking back by making more of its heritage appeal.

"It is a very exciting time to be at the house and the fundraising programme starts here," said general manager Katherine Ives. "We are quietly confident of getting the half a million and then we have this huge opportunity and this huge project."

"Where we need help is in getting the word out and finding people with business planning skills and proper financial strategy skills to come on board. Obviously, if anyone's got a cool £1.5m, that would be appreciated, otherwise we will be applying to lots of trust funds and starting an awareness campaign to target individuals and anyone coming into the house."

A quick tour by Katherine is an excellent opportunity to see what exactly will change at the historic building.

At the moment everyone comes through the main entrance, which makes for a huge inconvenience, especially when there's a wedding reception in the L-shaped foyer. But new plans will create another entrance around the back of the house so events can take place upstairs while the weddings progress, along with toilets near the entrance so no more will guests of the bride and groom have to cut through the café to relieve themselves!

"We've got all these piecemeal, scruffy bits at the back which will be demolished and replaced by this wonderful glass-roofed atrium to create a second entrance along with an all-singing, all-dancing learning centre," said Katherine, leading me around.

"The money will also go towards all the infrastructure stuff – replacing all the old electrics and plumbing etc because you can't really do a modern intervention like this and survive on the old which is probably on its last legs anyway. The whole idea is to add a really nice modern feature to the heritage of the building but without detracting from the historic bit."

"Heritage" is the watchword here as the Highgate venue finally awakens to the possibilities of its exceptional history. A case in point is an unusual-looking object near the entrance which bears no description but is, Katherine tells me, Nell Gwynn's bath!

"Which isn't a bath and was never a bath but a 17th century furniture feature," she said.

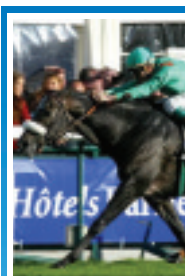

"So we'll have a heritage education officer to work within the building and highlight the historical features such as the bath with better signage. At the moment you might glance at a manky old bit of wood, while in future you will be told this is, say, a 1582 beam, alongside the fact you are coming into a historic house and who lived here."

"The whole idea is that we'll bring in a whole new heritage programme to run alongside the arts programme and transform not just the building but people's understanding of Lauderdale House."

NEWS

Mystery of abandoned cash stash

POLICE are trying to establish where a stash of cash hidden in woods near Muswell Hill has come from. Officers are investigating whether the thousands of pounds of cash was legitimately obtained or if it is the proceeds of crime.

The money was found in Coldfall Wood, off Creighton Avenue. Those wishing to claim the money will have to tell officers where it was hidden, how much there was and in which denominations and explain how they acquired it.

If the stash is found to be money obtained through criminal activity, it will be used to fund police operations under the Proceeds Of Crime Act.

Anyone with information about the money is asked to contact DS Russ Gayler of the Haringey Payback Unit at Tottenham Police station on 020 8345 0890 or call Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

Barking dog earns fine for family

A COUPLE have been fined after their barking dogs kept disturbing their neighbours. Haringey Council’s noise enforcement officers decided to take legal action after Gonel and Duzgan Tel failed to keep their pets quiet.

Earlier this year the couple, who live in Beattock Rise, Muswell Hill, were warned by the council they could face prosecution if their dogs kept disrupting neighbours and were issued with a noise abatement notice. The couple had agreed for two dogs to be taken away, but after one pet returned residents again complained of noise. Officers twice heard the dog barking for a long period and the pair were fined £200 at Highgate Magistrates’ Court. They also had to pay costs and a victim surcharge, bringing the bill to £330, which will be deducted from their benefits.

Nilgun Canver, cabinet member for environment, said: “We cannot allow dogs to cause problems and our officers will always follow through complaints.”

Stolen tools will return to owners

POWER TOOLS recovered in Tottenham police raids are being identified by detectives to be reunited with owners.

Police in Haringey are appealing to the public to identify the owners of up to 34 high-value power tools seized during two search warrants in Lordship Lane last month.

Operation Target, a crackdown against robbers, burglars and violent criminals by the Metropolitan police, has also unearthed more than 100 sat navs, 20 computers and 14 digital cameras. The suspected stolen items are being checked against a serial number list for cross reference.

Operation Target has aimed to provide extra patrols at key areas which have led to crime reductions and an improvement in public confidence and safety.

Anyone with information should call PC Will Vines or DC Zoe Bently of Haringey Crime squad on 020 8354 0877 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 5550 111.

Group's fury over plan to raze Victorian gasholder

By James Lowe

MEMBERS of a group determined to protect the area's heritage are furious at plans on the table to demolish a Victorian gasholder to make way for a housing development.

The gasholder, known as Hornsey No.1 is earmarked for demolition as part of the National Grid's plans to redevelop the old Hornsey Gasworks in Wood Green. The company has applied to build 1,000 homes on the site as well as offices, restaurants, cafés and a new public square. The structure is one of only two remaining gasholders built using an innovative design developed in 1888.

The design is an early example of a building style now associated with the city's Gherkin building and other creatively curved structures.

It has no statutory protection from demolition as it is not listed, despite an English Heritage report which described it as "probably the world's first geodesic design". The building was removed from Haringey Council's own list of buildings of architectural and historic interest back in 2006.

Heloise Brown, conservation adviser for the Victorian Society, said: "This is not just any old gasholder.

'Link with the past': Heloise Brown

"Hornsey No.1 will soon be the last surviving example of a highly innovative design and it must not be lost. It could be easily incorporated into a new development, and keeping the gasholder's elegant and geometrical frame would provide a link with the past and a remarkable engineering achievement."

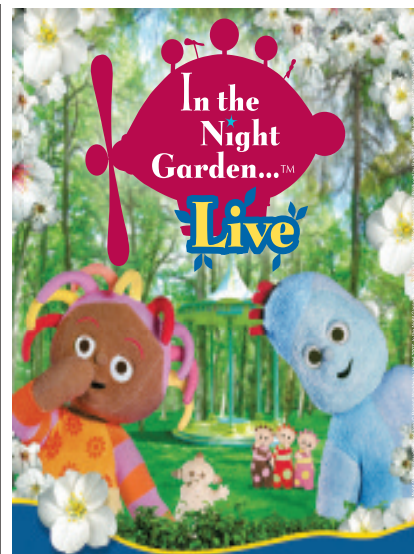

Gasholder frames have been reused successfully in Dublin, Vienna and Germany. Permission has also been granted to reuse three gasholders in King's Cross. The Victorian Society has written to Haringey Council recommending that the application is refused.

A spokesman from National Grid said:

"We believe our proposals offer the best way forward for the future of the site. Our design team have worked closely with councillors, planning officers and local residents and their respective residents' associations to create a scheme which takes into account the needs and aspirations of the existing community.

"We believe our plans would offer the best way forward in creating a new fully integrated vibrant quarter which would provide residential development and amenities to enhance Wood Green as a place to live and visit, including public space to enable activity and interaction."

Life torn apart by loss of memories

ANALOGUE is fast becoming one of the must-see theatre companies of the era.

Mile End, a play about a commuter randomly pushed under a train at the East End tube stop, quickly established the dynamic group, while Beachy Head further enhanced its reputation in a poignant portrait of a man who jumped off from the notorious suicide spot.

Now, completing the trilogy, Jacksons Lane in Highgate is proud to host another challenging play based around a death prior to its unveiling at the Edinburgh Festival.

In this case it's that of Henry Molaison - known as patient H.M. - who, sadly, found fame through personal tragedy.

"Henry had a bicycle accident when he was nine years old which led to a series of bad, epileptic seizures," said Analogue's co-director, Liam Jarvis.

"It became so bad that in 1953 him and his parents took the drastic decision to go for a new form of brain surgery which removed the whole of his hippocampus which turns memory into long term memories."

While curing the epilepsy, and retaining his I.Q., the results were devastating as Henry lost two years of memory up to the operation and, even more seriously, lost the ability to form any new memories. So, rather like the lead character in the film Memento, he could only retain memories for up to eight minutes.

"People who worked with him for years and years had to re-introduce themselves when they walked in the room," said Liam. "The title of the show refers to the number of slices his brain was cut into and it's interesting that there's a huge amount of research on the case study but a lot less about Henry the person..."

● 2401 Objects can be seen next Tuesday and Wednesday at Jacksons Lane from 8pm. For ticket details call the box office on 020 8340 5226.

Beginners (15)

Director: Mike Mills
Starring: Ewan McGregor, Christopher Plummer, Melanie Lauren

ONCE again I must recalibrate my opinion of Ewan McGregor. From the coolest of Brit-pop actors - Shallow Grave, Brassed Off and, the ultimate, Trainspotting - to the American anti-cool of Obi-Wan Kenobi, Down With Love and ridiculous The Island, you certainly can't accuse the Scottish actor of being pigeonholed.

Unfortunately, in the past few years, he seems to have sacrificed cinematic credibility for cash and the moment his fine features appeared in close-up at the start of his latest venture, inwardly groaned - surely the antithesis of my reaction a few years ago.

But... it is hoped... this is the opening salvo in his rehabilitation as this is a fine film and Renton, sorry, McGregor, is very good as the sensitive soul dealing with two major personal traumas.

The first is that his dad (Christopher Plummer) died two months ago from cancer. The second is that a few years before this event his dad came out of the closet, throwing himself into a homosexual lifestyle with abandon.

Now all Oliver has is his dog, Arthur, and vivid memories of his dad and eccentric mum from when he was very young. At a party he meets a beguiling French actress with laryngitis who can only communicate through writing and it's not long before they strike up the kind of leftfield relationship that viewers of nouvelle-vague films of the 1960s would be familiar.

In many respects this is an unusual film - apparently based on the director's experiences of his father coming out in old age - but invested with such heartfelt emotion that I'm positive cinema attendants will be finding lots of scrunched up tissues in their clean-up as McGregor turns in his best work in years.

It is also funny, especially the scenes between the young Oliver and a mother who seems to be on a mission to embarrass her son as often as possible in public - perhaps a symptom of her terribly lonely home life.

● MORE Edinburgh comedy previews in Crouch End this Friday. Jen Brister and Kerry Godliman are the headline acts performing for a lot cheaper than they would up north at just £7 (£5 cons) admission for both. Their night takes place Downstairs at the King's Head in Crouch End Hill and doors open at 8pm. Call 020 8340 1028.

● HAPPYLAND is the slightly deranged exhibition hanging in Jacksons Lane until the end of the week. Created by Marie-Louise Plum it coincides with the arts centre's Postcards Festival and is a collection of 3D objects, masks, and some bizarre images of brain-eating slug men; jolly, headless ballerinas; and schizophrenic clown folk with some very dubious intentions. It can be seen until July 31 and admission is free. Call 020 8341 4421.

● THE Lauderdale Photographic Exhibition returns to the arts centre next week. Visitors can see an impressive variety of entrants in the Open section and on the theme of Contrast. It opens next Tuesday and runs until August 7. Admission is free and the house is open from Tuesdays to Fridays, 11am to 4pm and Sundays, noon to 5pm. Call the house on 020 8348 8716.

Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 (12A)

A fitting finale to the epic eight-parter. Apart from the last five minutes, this is how blockbusters should be done: fantastic fight scenes, gripping plot, three-dimensional characters, an edge of darkness and crucial moments of stillness for necessary reflection. The boy wizard has grown-up.

Trust (15)

An intelligent, sensitive film about an oft-sensationalised subject. Fourteen-year-old Annie starts chatting to a seeming kindred spirit online before he tells her he's 20... then 25... and when she finally meets him he turns out to be in his mid-30s and intent on taking her to a motel room. One of the biggest surprises is that Friends' David Schwimmer directed with such aplomb.

Transformers 3: Dark Of The Moon (12A)

Another tired franchise tries 3D in a lame bid to add interest to a plot-void starring cars that turn into robots. Rosie Huntington Whitely (a blonde Megan Fox) is the eye-candy to rival the effects but it's too long and bombastic and therefore classic Michael Bay.

SPURS SUFFER SANDRO BLOW

By Dominique Stafford

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR have been dealt a blow with the news that Brazilian international midfielder Sandro will miss at least the first two months of the season.

Sandro picked up a knee injury while playing for his country in the Copa America, and has already undergone surgery which will rule him out until October at the earliest.

An official statement from Spurs said: "Following consultation with an independent knee specialist, Sandro underwent surgery on his left knee in London on Friday.

"The Brazil international was forced to withdraw from his country's Copa America campaign due to injury, with scans confirming he had torn his lateral meniscus, as well as suffering a calf strain.

"The specialist has advised a three-month rehabilitation period before a return to full training."

Sandro initially struggled to make an impact after joining Spurs for £8million from Internacional last year, but became an increasingly regular member of the side during the closing months of the campaign – and was particularly impressive in the two legs of their Champions League triumph against AC Milan.

Meanwhile, Tottenham manager Harry Redknapp has revealed that fellow midfielder Scott Parker is unlikely to join the club.

Spurs had been favourites to sign the reigning Football Writers' Player of the Year following West Ham's relegation from the Premier League, but Redknapp claims that the financial package involved means that they are almost certain to miss out on the England international – who has also been linked with Chelsea and Aston Villa.

The manager told the Sunday Mirror: "If you take into account the fee of around £8m, signing on fees and wages then you're talking about a £30m deal.

"There is no way the club would sanction a deal for a 30-year-old who would have no resale value at the end of his contract."

❑ Spurs' pre-season tour of South Africa began with a last-gasp 1-0 defeat at the hands of Kaizer Chiefs on Saturday.

On the sidelines: Sandro has been ruled out until at least October

Sprinter Henry is delighted by world title glory

SPRINTER Desiree Henry was unable to hide her delight after she claimed gold in the World Youth Athletics Championships.

The 15-year-old from Enfield and Haringey Athletic Club stunned red-hot favourite Shericka Jackson of Jamaica to triumph in the 200metres in the French city of Lille.

Having won her heat and then set a new personal best of 23.38seconds in winning her semi-final, Henry – who was the youngest member of the British team – fared even better in the final as she clocked a hugely impressive time of 23.25secs to claim gold by a substantial margin.

"I am so happy to be a champion," she said. "I have the heart for it and the correct mindset – I wanted this so bad.

"Not only did I get this amazing experience, but I also left as a world champion. It made me grow so much as an athlete.

"I may be less experienced than others, but this showed me that, once you are on the start line, it's anybody's game."

Meanwhile, Enfield and Haringey remain on track to retain their United Kingdom Young Athletes League title after booking their place in the national final with a comfortable victory in Sunday's regional final at Cophall Stadium.

And Luke Fagan won 200m gold in the English Athletics Championships in Bedford over the weekend.
